AT A TOWN HALL MEETING SPONSORED BY NEIGHBORHOOD ASSOCIATIONS ON DECEMBER 16, Laguna Honda Hospital's (LHH) new Executive Administrator, John Kanaley, said that the mission of LHH was not going to change. What he did not tell the community on December 16 was that by December 9 he had already helped change LHH's mission statement. Providing "long-term care" has been removed from LHH's mission statement. Also on December 16, Supervisor Sean Elsbernd indicated he would hold a hearing before the Board of Supervisors City Services Committee regarding the LHH admission policy. Elsbernd failed to deliver on his promise, and that hearing was never held.

The Department of Public Health Department (DPH) is using spin control to assert that a new "social rehab" program at LHH is merely a "physical rehab" program, but public documents demonstrate that this new grant will further eliminate skilled nursing beds from San Francisco's dwindling supply of beds for frail elderly and disabled San Franciscans.

Now, the mission of LHH has changed, and so has its admissions policy. DPH and LHH are hosting a Town Hall meeting on February 23 to discuss changes that are occurring at LHH, including a new focus on providing "behavioral health" programs that were formerly offered at the Mental Health Rehabilitation Facility. LHH's mission will be discussed, and LHH administrators plan to discuss a "Frequently Asked Questions" document describing what is going on at Laguna Honda. Unfortunately, that document contains information that is inaccurate.

Laguna Honda Hospital is in danger of being made much smaller. It is also being changed from a nursing home for the frail elderly and disabled into a "social rehabilitation facility for the urban poor," in the words of Director of Public Health Mitch Katz.

In 1999, voters approved Prop A, a $299 million bond measure to rebuild LHH at its present capacity of 1,200 beds; the remainder of funding comes from the tobacco settlement fund. The current estimated cost for the full replacement facility is $50 million over the initial estimate, but the Mayor's Office is determined not to exceed the initial budget, even if it means cutting 300 – 500 beds. For Director Katz, reducing the size of the LHH replacement facility is preferable to funding all 1,200 beds.
